

Identity in Context

The questions below prompt you to think about how outward or public identity can change depending on the context.

1. What are four words or phrases that describe you?
2. What are four hashtags you would use to describe yourself on a social media profile?
3. What are four words or phrases your friends or acquaintances would use to describe you?
4. What are four words or phrases your family would use to describe you?
5. What are your affiliations? These might include nationality, school, teams, clubs, etc.
6. List one or two strengths you would like to continue to develop.
7. What are some qualities you judge other people on?
8. "We contain multitudes," wrote Walt Whitman to describe that we express ourselves differently in different contexts. What is an example of how your personality changes as you associate with different groups of people? Why do you think it changes?
